

Welcome to the Wallace Collection

The Wallace Collection is a museum in central London.

The museum is in a large red brick building.

Inside the front entrance you will find some large glass doors.

Through the glass doors, you can see a grand staircase.

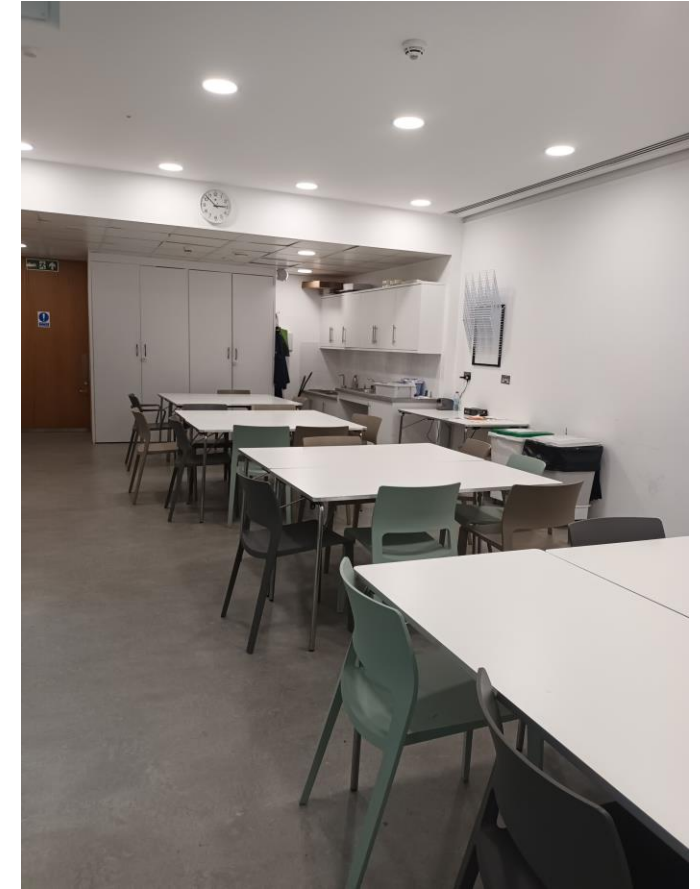

While at the Wallace Collection, you will meet friendly museum staff members and artists. Together we will go downstairs to the Learning Studio.

We might take the stairs, or the lift.

The Studio is a safe place where you can put coats and bags if you bring them. If you bring a drink or some food, you can have it here.

The toilets are nearby. Each toilet is in a small room with a sink as well.

During our session we will explore the large, colourful galleries together.

The galleries are usually quiet, but we might hear some noises such as:

- Visitors talking
- Creaky floorboards
- Clocks that chime

We might touch or feel art materials in the studio.
